TIPS TO STAY HEALTHY DURING MONSOON SEASON

#STARCITYCOMMUNITY #STAYHEALTHY

Monsoon is the best time to explore nature, where new plants rebirth and crops grows. It's a time when Lush green landscapes are awakened through frequent drizzles and when beautiful flower blooms.

Although it being the most beautiful season, it also increases our chances to get sick and catch the much-dreaded seasonal flu. Since the humidity is high, bacterial growth increases and most of these infections are from food and water borne. Here are some essential tips to protect ourselves from several infections and viral flu during rainy season.

Maintain personal hygiene

Maintaining a good personal hygiene will not only prevent yourself from getting sick but also will help prevent you from spreading diseases to other people. Regular hand washing with soap removes germs that can make you ill. Keeping your home clean and tidy, regularly using antibacterial cleaning agents to mop the floors and counter tops and making sure all windows and doors are equipped with mosquito nets to prevent flies and insects from entering your home will also prevent germs from spreading.

Boost your immunity

A person with a weak immune system gets infected easily. To keep your immune up, we need to have eat a balanced diet including fruits, vegetables and protein. A strong immune system guards our body against harmful infections and bacteria. To boost your immunity, increase the intake of foods rich in Vitamin C, leafy green vegetables, proteins like sprouts and soy bean including medicinal herbs and spices like ginger, garlic, cinnamon, turmeric, holy basil into your daily meals.

If you don't have much time to do active exercise at the gym, exercising indoors is recommended during the monsoon season. A good quality sleep also boosts your immune system and healthy adults should be aiming between 7 to 8 hours of sleep each night to feel well-rested and to be better able to fight off various illness.

Keep your house and surroundings clean and pest-free

Check out for any clogging or leakage and scan for stagnant water through the water coolers, flowerpots and other places. Frequently clean and change water from the tanks in order to prevent insects, bacteria and mosquito from breeding. Mosquito borne diseases are rampant during the monsoon season and prevention is always better than cure.

Drink and stay hydrated

Despite the weather being cool, you still have to drink plenty of water during the rainy season. Due to high humidity, our body does not sweat much that is why it is important to drink more water to flush out toxins from our body. Recommended to drink clean boiled water and if not possible, drink purified bottled water. Adult should aim to drink at least 1-2liters of water daily.

Avoid having street food

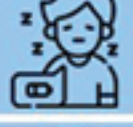

Stay away from the junk foods and ill prepared street foods, like Wet-thar-dote-htoe (Pork on Stick) or Myanmar salads prepared with condiments, vegetables, noodles, as they have bacteria that may cause indigestion. Remember to be wary of how your food is prepared, street food usually is exposed to flies and they are the major cause of stomach flu and intestinal worm infection. During this season try not to consume any kind of pre-cut or raw foods/fruits as they could contain germs that may lead to food poisoning.

Above are some of the essential tips for keeping yourself and your loved ones being sick during this beautiful season.
